

Live session etiquette guide

Live sessions are an excellent way to interact with your tutors and fellow learners.

To keep the session productive and professional, adhere to the following guidelines:

- The session will take place using Zoom. Check your software before entering the live session to ensure that you do not have any technical issues. Often, these issues can be solved in advance, and a quick check could prevent you from missing the session. It is best to use the Zoom app.
- Ensure that you have a working microphone and earphones so that you can listen to others and they can hear you.
- Log in to the live session in advance to ensure there are no technical difficulties. This gives you time to raise any login problems with support staff before the live session begins.
- On logging in, you will first be placed in a waiting room. Admittance to the main room will be granted when the live session's starting time is reached.
- Mute your microphone when you are not speaking. Although you will only be able to speak if the host assigns you microphone rights, it is important to only switch your microphone on when speaking, as background noises and feedback over your line could interrupt the other attendees.
- Turn off your mobile phone and other electronic devices when in the live session, as these items could also interfere with the sound.

Be respectful toward the host and other attendees. Do not spend too much time speaking if you are given the opportunity. Listen carefully to others' questions, as they may raise the same point you would like to make.
